I watched my mother die following a stroke, the process took years and she tried several times to starve herself to death. Her choice would have been to end her life. She nursed and cared for her mother for years following her stroke and understood fully the effect this had on our family, my mother hated being a burden, she was a very active person and being trapped in a body that was severely handicapped and that couldn't communicate must have been extremely distressing for her. Passing this legislation will be a great legacy for the current government, we will look back in future years and wonder why it took so long.
