Re: Submission to the Health Committee

Dear Health Committee Members,

I consider that we as a society have both large and small decisions to make. While we must do all we can to decide for the things we understand about, we must not decide about what we do not grasp.

I consider that the choice to voluntarily die because of illness to be choosing a death we cannot appreciate. Who understands death? It is as large and mysterious as life.

I believe we need in our land to leave such things to take natural courses. I believe that the decisions for or against them should be out of any one individual's hands.

Empowerment is for life and growth. We have been besotted with the glorification of self killing ever since we heard the words sung "you took your life as lovers often do."

Whoever will decide for a death in a person's suffering, whether it be the person or another, will not have the empowerment meant for life and growth, but the legal license to end all hope...a depressing action and commodifying of a person.

Sincerely,
Michael Curtin
