Re: Oppose euthanasia law

Dear Health and Environment Committee,

Getting old takes a lot of courage, and the elderly need our support.

We can support them by encouraging them to live and promoting the value of their being (alive).

Through the proposed euthanasia law, it undermines the value of the elderly, their self esteem and value and places pressure on elderly people to end the fight for life.

As a society we should be promoting hope and seeking to reduce the suicide numbers.

If this law is enacted, do not be surprised if a lot of people line up for this.

As a society, the Australian society could be regarded as successful, and has provided its people with a good life and lifestyle.

This new law goes against and is in defiance of the Australian genre.

Therefore if you enact this law, there will be consequences, and I believe the consequences will be to the negative.

The law is very prideful, in thinking that we know better than our forebears.

There is no honour and dignity to curtailing life before it is time.

Sincerely James Tayler

Sincerely,
james Tayler
