Submitter Comments:

I supporting the introduction of the bill in the form recommend by the QLD Law Reform Commission. The Law Reform Commission has already taken a wide variety of submissions into account into formulating its recommendations and four Australian states have already passed this law with very similar provisions. Debating this further is only adding to the pain and suffering to those who are dying in the most difficult of circumstances.

Further, any conscientious objection provisions must ensure that people who are in religious hospitals, hospices and aged are not denied access to their legal end of life rights.
