I cannot understand how or why, in today's civilised society why I should be forced to endure monumental pain from a terminal illness. If I am an adult, coherent and in unendurable pain, then it is NOBODY else's business whether I choose to end MY life peacefully. Period. I particularly object to religious ideals (which I have no belief or association with) being of any importance in MY life or decisions.

For the record was I diagnosed with stage four cancer in brain and lungs and am currently cancer free. I live with the possibility of it returning and so the ability to make this decision for myself is incredibly important. Sure we are a compassionate society???
