I am vehemently opposed to Crocodile culling. It simply is not the answer. Waterways in FNQ will never be safe even with culling. Education is the answer - make people aware of the risks. Tourists and most Queenslanders love Crocodiles - they are native species and are incredibly exciting to see. Crocodiles are also very good at self- regulating their own numbers so there is simply no need to introduce culling. I note that the people who want to introduce culling are the hunter types who like killing animals for pleasure which in my mind makes them no better than big game hunters in Africa. So stop this bill and allow nature to manage their numbers. Education is the answer as far as safety around Crocodiles is concerned. Always.
