Hi, the Containers for Change is a great idea, but there are two challenges that I can see; firstly, the value of the 10c refund is being eroded by inflation over time, and should be increased to 20c or more to maintain and grow the incentive to recycle, and secondly, there are too few return points and too many inconvenient ones. As a further suggestion, I think if you could make the 10/20c return deliverable to a charity or sporting group, those charities and sporting groups could mobilise their supporters to use this service more, hence providing them with more funds, while giving the contributor a sense of altruism.
