Chair Surrogacy Committee.

I was interested to read that there is to be an investigation into Altruistic Surrogacy. As hard as it may be for adults to cope with the grief of childlessness, I strongly believe that the needs of children always come first. We do not live in an ideal world, but I believe that children should at least have the knowledge that when they were conceived their parents were committed to each other and to the child.

Last time I went to my hairdresser an unattached homosexual, he told me how he is progressing in his search for an incubator for his child.

I hope that the needs of children will always be the first priority in your discussions and any decisions that are made.

Yours sincerely,
Roslyn Lee
