The first words in the proposed legislation document state that it is unsure of its objectives and then cannot effectively argue that it will have successful outcomes.

The premise is that punishment is the best option.

This approach has NEVER been successful as the statistics show.

The question to answer is WHY first, when you find that truth you can proceed to HOW.

The solution is in finding the underlying cause of the undesirable behaviour and then supporting the necessary solutions to this primary issue first. Then logically the result will automatically be greatly reduced negative behavioural outcomes negating the need for punishment.

Use the power of knowledge and understanding instead of the a primitive and brutal, reactive method to find a solution.
