I believe that one problem in Maryborough, Qld is that when prisoners are released from the local jail, they are released into the Maryborough community. They are apparently given a bus or train fare and driven to the bus stop, but there is no supervision to ensure that they actually get on a bus or train and leave town. I realise that it will come at a cost, but I believe that they should be escorted and returned to their place of arrest, with their incarceration finishing when they reach that destination. This action will lessen the possibility of undesirable homeless people being on the streets of Maryborough.
