I'm not the best writer for this type of submissions but will do my best.

Overall a lot of the new changes to penalties will not do a single thing for public safety, criminals do not care about punishments as their mindset is living for the moment and more about worrying about not being taken out by a another criminal, so if they want a gun, they will find through many illegal sources.

If the penalty is 2 years or 20 years it doesn't make a difference to them.

As for the Terrorists and penalties for their actions, in nearly all that have attacked Australia in the last 20 years are from a Islamic background, from what I see nothing will save people from their attacks, they don't care about loosing their life and their intentions is to maim and kill as many people as possible,

Can see the only way to possibly reduce life's lost is to have the state and federal police to take a lot more notice of Islamic groups activities.including surveillance of sermons in mosques and schools, stopping radicalisation early is the only solution and watching for overseas travel to known world hotspots.

I am happy to see no NSW and WA style firearm laws, these states having such a strong anti firearms stance and treating of law abiding citizens like criminals is totally wrong and is totally Un Australian, I can see huge problems in the coming years with feral animal control and the huge effect this will have on the environment in the future. (And taxpayers will end up having to pay for the control of feral animals) as well as the damage to farmland and food production loss.

Hunters are a free resource for the Government, a self funding way to keep feral animal populations down and help keep small businesses running

As for the minimum changes for firearm owners basically being left the same, I am happy with.

I am a firearm owner, mostly an attend my local SSAA for weekly shoots, and occasionally hunting on a family owned property.
