I do believe that one must be a citizen of Australia before holding a firearm license but do not believe we need any more laws or changes to them. There are already common sense laws in place that keep law abiding citizens in check. Criminals and people seeking to harm others will always use what they want to do so as they don't abide by the law. What I believe would help protect everyone would be better communication between organisations and more effective management of people that end up on watch lists.
