We in Australia already have tough enough gun laws but no laws on guns will ever end gun violence or the illegal use of guns simply saying "It's illegal" does not stop the criminal element and terrorists their entire goals is to break the law.

As Victoria has shown with their machete ban is doesn't stop the offence from occurring and buy backs don't cover criminals it takes tax dollars from the public in order to seize property from the law abiding which in my opinion is theft. Taking property of law abiding Australian and making them pay for it is unacceptable.

To often government says punishing criminals doesn't get to the core of the issue so then if that is the case how did this happen why has no one asked where did these people come from and how did they obtain the license. Because that was a failure not of our laws or legal loops holes but on government and law enforcement who's responsibility it is to secure our borders and keep out the foreign threats so they do not become domestic threat. While law enforcement failed to communicate about a very real risk of danger enough to have them watched yet did nothing to hinder their ability to arm themselves.

We already have laws that should have prevented this but a failure to enforce them was the reason it happened if we can send a Nazi back to Africa for standing in front of a building why then have we not deported suspected terrorists and visa holders who breach their visa terms by engaging in political activism a right exclusive to citizens as it should be.

We have allowed foreign entities from war torn countries to bring their war to our door step and are shocked when it comes at the rice of Australian lives. The reformed should be cracking down on foreign political instigators not on limiting the rights of Australian who are expected to bear the consequences of the action of foreign extremists.
