It is not the top end crimes that the general public are concerned about!! It is the daily breaking into houses and stealing cars by juveniles that is most concerning!! One gets very annoyed when you read that a group of youths in their teens smashed a stolen car and it's the drivers 50 plus offence and he gets out yet again on bail! The law should be changed so even after one offence on bail means being locked up! Ok you don't want to send them to jail with hardened criminals do build juvenile detention centres preferably out bush where they can be taught skills and helped to be better citizens. Don't say no money as we can raise billions for sports stadiums often only used once a week! Even buying old motels and locking up the first offenders for a couple of weeks is better than letting them out on bail. Extending sentences for murderers and rapeists won't stop the far more prevalent crimes of daily stealing cars and breaking into homes and businesses
