Dear Sir / Madame,

Please retain the current requirement for voters to provide proof of their identity.

This requirement is needed to ensure voter fraud does not occur.

Providing proof of identity is usual practice in many situations and is widely accepted by the general public.

it seems illogical to remove this requirement from voting practice, and if the proof of identity requirement is removed, the electoral system will be at significantly more risk for corrupt behaviour and corrupted results.

Proof of identity is a security measure necessary to minimise the risk of a corrupted result.

Please do not put the election results at risk for tampering by fraudulent voting possibilities that would more easily become possible if the present accepted by the public requirement of proof of identity is removed.

Thank You,

Sandra Kremor
