I read the following and think, "Does the government not have more important and demanding work to do?"

On March 27th the new Attorney General, Yvette D'Ath, tabled a bill that will among other things...

- *reinstate the $1,000 gift threshold amount, backdated to 21 November 2013;
- *remove voter proof of identity requirements; and
- *remove voter proof of identity requirements for local government elections;

What is so bad about having to prove your identity to vote. Was this not a solution against vote rigging?
