Queensland is a democracy. The Queensland Government should be doing everything it can to ensure fair and equal voting rights for all citizens of this State.

It would be unjust if conditions changed and it became harder for some Queensland citizens to vote.

Queenslanders who live in remote communities, disabled citizens, citizens who frequently change their address, the elderly, Indigenous citizens and young people should all be treated fairly. A democracy only works well if we all have an equal opportunity to participate.

All governments should be accountable to the people who elect them. As a citizen of this State, I would like to see the background research which supports the Attorney-General's decision to seek these changes. What evidence does he have to support his views?

I am 67 years old, a very concerned Queensland citizen, who strongly believes that democracy is precious and that all people of this State must have fair and equal access to the opportunity to vote for their government.
