

8th October 2019

Emma Capp

Dear Members,

Thank you for the opportunity to provide feedback on the Summary Offences and Other Legislation Amendment Bill 2019.

I am writing to express my concern and opposition to these new laws, which are undermining the right of the general public to stand up peacefully against destructive practises which threaten an environment that is on the brink of ecological collapse.

I am a parent as well as someone who has been attending climate change rallies etc for the past 20years. I am worried about the world that our children face. There is no more time for inaction.

"The continuing refusal, despite persistent warnings from scientists and activists, to stop human-caused climate breakdown is the great moral failure of our time. No amount of traffic chaos from a blocked city street can compare to the threat of more numerous and severe natural disasters. No safety hazard for police officers using power tools compares to the climate-related "health emergency" already declared by the Australian Medical Association. No illegal act of protest is nearly as extreme as being told repeatedly that your chosen lifestyle is threatening the existence of whole nations and species yet refusing to do anything to change it."

- The basis given for the drafting of these new laws, that activists are using "lock-on" devices to attempt to injure police and safety officers, is not backed up by evidence. These devices are a part of Non-Violent Direct Action and so are not for the purpose of injury to anyone. They have been used for decades, yet the Queensland government has not offered examples of police being injured, or anybody being charged with setting "booby-traps" inside lock-on devices; only speculation. Police, when questioned by the Guardian, did not state that the lock on devices were dangerous to their personal safety. Historically, there have been no charges made to anyone using a lock-on device with the intent to injure police.
- The legislation in fact misrepresents the devices by including sinister-sounding terminology like "sleeping dragon" and "dragon's den" which is not used by the activists themselves.
- If it was the case that activists were trying to use lock-on devices to injure police, that would already be illegal and the law has sufficient power to punish that as it stands currently.
- The proposed law gives police extra powers to search without a warrant. Police already use "stop and search" powers to intimidate and hinder protesters who have not broken any law, and this law will give them more justification to do so.
- Under the guise of safety, the government is bringing in laws which are really about stopping protest activity. The right to protest is a recognised pillar of democracy, and this right should include not just tokenistic free speech but actual effective protest activity as developed by historical protest movements.

- Australia has a proud history of successful protest movements using civil disobedience. These have advanced the rights of workers, gender and sexual equality, indigenous rights and environmental protection. Many of our national parks today are the result of protest activity which used devices of the kind prohibited under this law. Queensland Labor, which traces its origins to one such illegal protest (the 1891 shearers' strike) should recognise this.
- To bring in superfluous laws, with limited evidential basis to restrict protest is dangerous. Not only does it erode our democracy, but it suppresses one of the vitally needed tools to address the climate crisis we are currently facing – something which, unlike lock-on devices, is a genuine threat to health and safety.

Thank you for your time.
Sincerely

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to be 'E. Hoff', written in a cursive style.