RE: Proposed changes to Identification laws.

I firmly believe that any person living or visiting Australia, should be treated as equally as the next person.

I believe if you are required to prove your identification, you should be able to look at a person face to face and see if their photo identification matches the face in question.

Should your religion or country require you to wear a veil or face covering, that is fine in your country, but you are living or visiting Australia and should obey the rules of the Country.

Face to face identification is a must. We are required to remove face covering helmets when entering some buildings i.e. banks so what is good for one is good for all.

Full face to face viewing is a must for identification.

Yours truly,
