I am a gender critical feminist who knows no one can actually change their sex, as there is no science for it and sex is both encoded in our very DNA as well as reinforced through cultural conditioning. While I would consider the socialization of children as boys or girls abolished, as it does harm to people to be pushed toward certain behaviors if they are not so inclined, I also know that it is monstrous to medically alter children over gender roles they do not understand outside of what their trusted adults tell them. And to tell grown women who birth babies out of our women's bodies that biological sex is not real, and that any man can identify into being a woman and then occupy our spaces, at our risk and peril, is the most hateful and toxic form of misogyny i have witnessed in my time on Earth. I uphold human rights, gay rights, and sexual liberation, but to remove the hard won rights and boundaries of natal women is shocking. This is a men's rights movement, in a world where almost all violence is committed by men, and the number of women and children harmed at their hands is what former president of the USA Jimmy Carter called in a recent book he wrote, "the largest human rights crises on our planet."So, if you are set to pass legislation that puts women and children even more at risk by allowing biological men into spaces where we are vulnerable, I will spend a good deal of my time discouraging tourism to your country, as I currently do any other country that thinks so little of women that we are not allowed to even speak against this men's rights movement that erases the very real, science based and obvious definition of human sex differences.
