

The Research Director
Parliament House
Brisbane.

Dear Sir/Madam,

13/5/09

Whether by affirmation or allegiance the first and foremost issue should be loyalty to your country and secondly to your country.

The Research Director
Parliament House
Brisbane.

13/5/09.

Dear/Madam,

Whether by affirmation or allegiance the first and foremost issue should be loyalty to your country and secondly to the crown.

While recognising aboriginal people were the first to occupy Australia, they remained as hunters and gatherers. In the 50,000 years since they arrived they have not made any worthwhile contribution to this country. Therefore recognition as the first occupants is as should go, with no special privilages for them above others. In other words everyone should have equal rights. Having said that, they deserve a better education away from an aboriginal reserve to better fit in to the future.

Alan R Durbridge

RECEIVED
14 MAY 2009
LEGAL, CONSTITUTIONAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW
COMMITTEE