Kenneth A Eagers

Dear Director

It is my belief that gender or people of any race should not be mentioned or included in a preamble to a constitution, to do so could be seen as discrimination by others, I believe it best to regard everyone as a citizen.

Australia is a christian nation and the blessing of Almighty God should be included in a preamble to a constitution. The word religion covers all religious belief and is not discrimination to any.

In my attached submission I make reference to (any like minded group of citizens) this is a very broad statement which affects large numbers of people, to give a few examples, some of these people take up charitable activities, many like minded people make a living from the activity they pursue, while others become members of a wide variety of organizations.

Sincerely
Ken Eagers
