Dear Sir,

I find it alarming that there is speculation of important changes being intended that the people should be more aware of. Also, I believe it is possible that some should actually involve the people.

I have heard there is the possibility of important fundamental changes being considered regarding the powers of the governor, and that they are not being well publicised.

I also understand that there is argueably a requirement for some of the intended changes to be changed by the authority of a referendum rather than simply by parliament.

I would like my concerns addressed by your facilities please.

Yours in the interests of public awareness and appropriate protocol,

George Wakelin
