It's obvious to me that those people who advocate extended hotels trading hours for monetary gain have no community conscience whatever, who on earth would want to be drinking at 3a.m. except a socially maladjusted person with no real life values except for selfishness that inevitably puts a strain on families + emergency services. Two nights ago I was privy to an alcohol fueled domestic, the woman concerned had phoned me on her mobile + left in on, I could hear her little boys crying in the background, "Mummy Mummy, Daddy Daddy" the drunk-en husband wanted the keys to their car to go to the pub, he was threatening the mother, it was not very pleasant, I know pubs still sell alcohol to people under the influence, at least if the pubs were closed in the early hours it may cut down some alcohol induced violence not to say some innocent person being killed on the roads.

Yours faithfully.

TONY FREEAR.
