Committee Secretary,

Public Works & Utilities Committee,

Parliament House,

George Street,

Brisbane 4000

Dear Sir/Madam,

How can we ever have a level playing field when,

The Northern Territory Government bought back all Taxi Service Licences at the market value and created a level playing field and ride share are paying nothing

You buy a perpetual TSL as an asset from the government. You also pay hundreds of thousands of dollars for this asset. Then this government fails to enforce the laws that was made to protect that asset value, the asset the government sold to you.

The government bought back the states fishing licences, dairy industry licences, Northern Territory TSL and now Western Australia are looking down the same road.

As being a self funded retiree and not asking the government for any help, all you have done is burden every taxpayer in Queensland with extra families to move onto centrelink, and public housing.

I cannot see this as a logical move and no common sense to prevail. I hope you make the right decision to sort this out before something really dramatic happens

Regards Peter Francis Conohan
