I do believe in a free country. But I believe that responsibility is required for actions. E transportation whether it be car bike or scooter, should be regulated just like any petrol device. Why would any source of propulsion be any different from another. With that said, the same rules should apply across all devices. Why would a petrol power motor bike for a 15 year old be illegal on road or foot path but an electric version be legal. That makes no sense in any world. Moreover, when on road same rules apply to all propulsion devices. Licensing, age limits, etc I have personally seen and know people directly effected by irresponsible underage ebike accidents actually death and another case of severe brain damage. Also, I suffer from depression and run for therapy. Having simple headphones in during a run is liability not hearing these quiet EV devices zooming along footpaths. Not to mention simply walking the dog When is enough enough? Thank you.
