At minimum, I would like to see some type of mandatory training enforced for users of e-mobility devices. This could be incorporated with learners drivers licences which would ensure users were aware of road rules and be a minimum of 16. Registration should also be considered for devices that travel as fast as cars, and are using the same infrastructure. At present, there are no roadworthy or safety checks to ensure these devices are safe and properly maintained, and not enough deterrents to ensure people are using these safely, e.g. helmets/single rider only.
