Can we put a few things into perspective here... more cars on roads means more accidents same thing for E-bikes & Scooters... if people do the right thing & ride these things properly & carefully less accidents, cyclists are on roads & need to obey rules no different for E-bikes & Scooter riders... I'm in my mid 40's and enjoy a ride to the beach or shops and the people I see on these things that are age appropriate are all doing the right thing, it's the U18 teens that are hooning up footpaths, keeping up with cars on the roads or popping a monnow while travelling at high speed all of these are going to result in injuries or fatalities... Most paths are a shared path so walkers runners & riders all need to be respectful & careful & should all be enjoying everything QLD has to offer. There are car accidents from stupidity & the same goes for E-bikes & E-scooters. Don't let the minority ruin it for those of us doing the correct thing, if we can drive a car we should be able to ride a E-bike or Scooter, by all means enforce rules of helmets but common sense is all that is required. And maybe parents buying these $5,$6 & $7000 bikes need to be held accountable for their child's actions if under age.
