The use of various forms electronic mobility has increased significantly in our local area. Unfortunately most of these seem to be used by teenage children/ adolescents for creating chaos and intimidating groups congregating around local spots, such as sports fields and skate parks. They then ride their e-bikes at very high speed, for no particular purpose or destination, just riding around footpaths, in the middle of the road with cars having to avoid hitting them. It feels completely out of control and lawless. This can't be right. We need stronger controls of all varieties, including education, legislation, policing, penalties and parental authority. This definitely needs actions to remove the normalisation of these devices. I am extremely concerned as a car driver that the e-bike users have limited knowledge of road safety. authority
