I find it troubling that a government can believe it is right to challenge the legislations listed so that it may continue on with their own agenda for building a stadium for a one-off event that will destroy a natural habitat that has been around longer than our parliament has existed. If these legislations are dismissed, it will create a very dangerous precedent for future challenges to legislations that are there to protect the natural beauty in the environments around us. To change our own laws to meet the criteria for an Olympic event to be held, when as it stands the development should not be made is a travesty of justice. These laws should stand, and the stadium itself should not go ahead on the Victoria Park site.
