In order to build a stadium on Victoria Park, the government is going to ignore 15 other laws. If someone has to break 15 rules in order to get something done then surely what they are doing is illegal? The stadium they are proposing is not even big enough, so they are going to destroy a park and build something not even fit for purpose. The location is ridiculous, there is no public transport nearby, there is a massive hospital nearby that will surely be impacted all through construction and afterwards. On to construction, based on ALL of Brisbane city councils other jobs, not one is on time or on budget, so how do they think they will get this built in time and to cost? Its not going to happen. So they will be late, which can't happen, or they will throw a tonne of money at it, which makes it a less viable option than building out at Eat St markets or refurbishing the gabba. This plan has not been well thought out and they are just pushing ahead with something that is going to have a massive cost blow out, break 15 laws to build and impede access to a major hospital, all whilst destroying a cultural heritage green space.
