I am deeply concerned that Australian governments show little interest in preserving the unique flora and fauna they have inherited, only to use them for financial gain. To the rest of the world, the words "kangaroo, platypus, koala, wombat" etc. summon up the land called "Australia" so watching animal-rich stretches of land taken away for commercial use is not only wasteful but an example of short-term thinking. Each country has its marvels which their human authorities are beholden to uphold. Climate change is mainly caused by human activities and can only be stopped by following solid advice from scientists and other experts. Each specie on this earth is meant to be here and has the right to live a peaceful life no matter what.
