I have a number of Environmental and Heritage concerns: Loss of Green Space: Victoria Park, also known as Barrambin, is one of Brisbane's largest inner-city green spaces. The development threatens to reduce this vital public area, which has been a recreational haven for residents. Heritage Significance: The Queensland Environment Department has recommended that the entire park be heritage-listed due to its historical and cultural importance. Despite this, the government plans to proceed with the stadium construction. Indigenous Cultural Importance: Victoria Park holds deep significance for First Nations communities. Traditional owners have expressed that the development disregards Aboriginal connections to the land and previous commitments to preserve the park as public green space.
