It sounds like a good idea but my concerns are with each unique waterway being treated fairly and with local consultation. I believe the controlling body will just be another 'jobs for the boys' with funding going to CEOs etc and not actually what is needed to preserve the waterways.

MSQ and local councils are doing an excellent job but just not enough local funding. Example- more on water time for MSQ patrols to enforce existing laws and regulations and more monitoring the actual waterways and up river conditions. I believe a decentralised system would be the best solution for local waterways.
