Re Vegetation Management Laws

We run 2000 acres in Central Queensland and practice regenerative farming and value our bio-diversity.

The control of vegetation on our property is imperative to the maintenance of the property and well being of our livestock, maintaining a holistic and commercially viable rural business. We harvest vegetation for animal fodder and erosion control which minimises the impact on waterways.

We believe that research and education is the true control needed in rural management techniques, please invest our state money into these areas and the long term benefits will be seen for future generations.

It is essential that individual landholders are able to assess and implement vegetation management strategies based on their individual land types, land condition, business requirements and climatic conditions.

If you would care to discuss this matter please do not hesitate to contact me.

Yours sincerely,

Glenda
