I do believe animals that are farmed for our benefit and either milked and or killed as an end for them, should be afforded a splendid life. We depend on them, for food and nourishment and they depend on us to do the right thing by them. It is just and fair that if you own an animal, any animal, that we force to depend on us, should rightly have a good and decent life. Whether it be a house pet or farm animals, they should be well kept. How it ever became the norm or accepted practice to cause discomfort or harm to any captive animal is too hard for me to fathom. We will always eat meat and drink milk and have dairy products. What should never be, is the mistreatment of those beings that we are "using" for our own greed or need. If there are those in places that would treat them badly, they need to be removed and replaced with those of compassion. We will always kill to eat, but we should never inflict pain and suffering on those we exploit. The lives we enlist for our benefit should be given good lives, well lived. From chickens and goats and cows and sheep and horses, all deserve a good life. Please, do better than the pitiful bill that greedy, uncaring people have put forth in an effort not to benefit these poor animals in their care. That just says enough to try an shut down those that believe these beings deserve so much more, for the life they will ultimately lose for our gain.
