My little conure bird got stuck to one of these in the pantry. She could not get free and fell out of the 3rd shelf level high up screaming and in a panic which did not help as she was then stuck from head to tail. I grabbed a towel and held her so she could not move and slowly pulled her off. This was like pulling someone from a tornado. Her feather had to be pulled out and it took all my strength to do this. All the time with her screaming. I felt so guilty as I put this death trap in the pantry and my pets roam. Please ban these. It's so cruel and painful to any animal wild or pet who gets stuck on these. I was so lucky I was home or she would be dead. She is still recovering from this 2 months later. Imagine if this happened to you. Every time you move you get more impeded in the glue. The only way to free you is to pull you off and leave your skin behind as we do this. Beyond cruel. Or we leave you to starve in pain as this is the reality.
