As a veterinary nurse, I see animals have accidents all the time. It's very hard to treat any type of animal without any restraints, especially if you have an animal with a severe injury. My animals wonder the paddock on a daily basis and are yarded or haltered when need be for worming, tick and other treatments. Without the use of restraints animals die from large worm counts, horses founder from not getting their feet trimmed, dogs bite and become aggressive and un able to be handled without restraints. And Australian history shows the use of bullocks and horses, and so do the wars. I don't believe that people who enjoy riding horses, showing cattle or taking their dog to the vet should be published.
