I wish for glue traps to be banned. Their availability to persons who do not have the knowledge on how to use them in a targeted manner has resulted in many instances of suffering and death of native wildlife that are not the target species. Mouse and rat traps in many forms are readily available and reduce the impact to other species by their design. If there isn't an outright ban, at least consider the commercial availability and make such traps only available to those with knowledge on native species so that traps are set in appropriate ways as to avoid unnecessary suffering.
