

Inquiry into the Animal Care and Protection Amendment Bill 2022

Submission No: 811
Submitted by: Noel Woodrow
Publication: Make my submission and my name public
Attachments: No attachment

Submitter Comments:

Just because the animals involved are small, that is no reason that they should be committed to such an incredibly painful death. The wide range of creatures involved - far wider than the target species - shows just how indiscriminate these traps are. I can see no good reason that these traps should continue to be sold other than the profit that Bunnings make. It also says something about the mentality of those who buy and use these traps. They should be banned immediately and other proven methods of vermin control instituted.