On the possible banning of glue traps, firstly I would like to congratulate Queensland for considering banning glue traps at all, as little has been done to remove these deadly traps from sale elsewhere. The whole idea of the glue trap is horrific and poorly thought out, and it is blatantly obvious that any poor, unsuspecting creature could become stuck on them including small mammals and birds, leading to slow, painful deaths. There is no argument that can be made in favour of the traps, as they are in themselves designed to slaughter any living thing that accidentally happens to touch them, including endangered species. Petitions to Bunnings to remove the traps from their shelves has fallen on deaf ears. I would urge you to take the first step and ban them altogether, then hopefully other states will follow suit.
