Hello, I am writing to ask please, please-that as you all are reviewing the QLD animal cruelty bill you include bans on glue traps in it. These are used all over and it is a terrible way for a creature to die. Imagine getting your feet stuck to tar, thrashing around wildly to try to get out which catches more of your body in it and sticks you even more, and being stuck there, scared and slowly starving to death. I'm sorry for the vivid description but really, whoever came up with these and mass produced them had some messed up morals and didn't think at all how it would feel to be sitting there, stuck and helpless for days. Also, animals that aren't supposed to be caught end up in them as well- if there's a glue trap covered in bugs, a bird is going to land right on that thing and be a casualty of one person's vendetta against flies. I know you have probably seen a lot of these emails for this issue and I'm probably making the same points as them- so please, PLEASE, people care about this-I we are trying to be a voice for these creatures that don't have one that are overlooked so much of the time. And You are in a position to do something to help them and future animals be free of this. In a world so full of catastrophies, can you take the time to help address their's, as small as it may be? Thank you so much, and thank you for caring about the little lives we share the world with.
