Submitter Comments:

I am part of the residential building sector and I am disheartened, as are many others, to see a trend in social and financial exclusion within our cities. The growing housing affordability problem is not looking at easing unless action is taken. I am personally affected by increasing rent prices and will no longer be able to live close to work and city life due to the unavailability of affordable housing in the inner city. I would like to see some kind of contribution or incentives provided by the government to encourage socially and financially sustainable residential development.
