I fully support this bill. The science is absolutely clear that we might just stop all new coal and gas projects, and urgently wind down existing projects .. The urgency of this cannot be understated. Climate and ecological breakdown are well underway, and we know that unless we act immediately and drastically, much of this breakdown will be irreversible and irretrievable. Governments at all levels seem to be in capable of understanding their responsibilities to future generations . Their inaction is inexcusable, and indeed they will be held to account by future generations whose lives they have willingly sold for a few more measly dollars, or a few cosy post political jobs.It is also imperative that we support those who have been employed by the fuel industry at the coalface so to speak up. There are many communities who have relied on regular jobs from coal, oil or gas, and who are in fear of what the future holds for them . It is incumbent upon the government to support these communities, either by retraining or offering other support packages. We must support these people who are inadvertent players in this industry. I fully support Michael Berkman's bill
