Dear Committee Members, I wish to state that with rising cost of living driven by inflation, the people who work hard to put food on our tables are the ones primarily driven to abandoning their livelihoods as it's no longer feasible. I'm talking about the growers, the truckies, the middle man. The supermarkets aren't even accepting good old fashioned crops of food anymore. They're wanting GMO food and farmers with non GMO foods can't sell their genuine products which are healthier and more nutritious. We are killing ourselves through the supermarkets. Stop the inflatable and stop the greed. Stop allowing corporations to control what we buy, eat and drink. Stop the price gouging and give the farmers and the middle man their fair pays. Give them what they're worth. Also food shouldn't have severely different prices depending on where you live. Bring the costs down for consumers by bringing the profit margins, inflation, interest rates and the cost of living down. It's not rocket science. You don't need to keep increasing wages if you decrease all these other factors. People will actually be feeling their worth of their paychecks if everything else is comparable. Kind regards.
