I have come to learn of the recent proposal for legislation to change concerning HVAC and refrigeration and as a refrigeration mechanic it concerns me greatly. Firstly I would like to put forward that there is already a trade recognised organisation that regulates HVAC and refrigeration and that is ARCTIC already a state and federally recognised institution. Secondly, plumbers are not trained for use and safety of refrigerants and the complex machinery that it takes 4 years as an apprentice and a long career to fully comprehend. And lastly how much damage and confusion it would cause to my industry in which I ply my living and trade. Further consultation and input from plumbers themselves is required as they don't think the plumbing industry fully understands the scope of the proposal.

Regards,

Bradley Crick,
Refrigeration Mechanic
