To whom it may concern:

As toll road operators are saying they plan to keep increasing the toll charges in line with inflation, at a time when their toll roads are seriously under-utilised, my submission is:

That toll road operators slash their charges by half, to encourage vehicles of all kinds to make frequent use of the tunnels, etc, thereby freeing up normal highways and streets, etc for the normal traffic for which they were designed.

Reasoning:

Trucks and many vehicles are using normal toll-free highways and streets to avoid paying a toll, instead of by-passing busy streets, etc.

The toll companies will complain that their total income will be down, but the converse is true as it will become much cheaper for drivers to pay a small toll and avoid traffic holdups.

Yours faithfully
