PREFACE

The Commission of Inquiry into Possible Illegal Activities and Associated Police Misconduct, presided over by Commissioner Fitzgerald, lasted for just over two years from its instigation in 1987 to the handing over of the final report to Premier Ahern in July 1989. The Commission held public hearings on 238 days. One hundred and forty-two people were represented either by themselves or others and 339 witnesses appeared before the Inquiry. The transcripts totalled 21,504 pages and there were 2,304 exhibits. The final Report, now commonly referred to as the Fitzgerald Report, has 600 pages including the appendices.

This index was prepared to remedy the fact that the Report has no index, which has made access to specific items difficult. Whilst there has been limited access to electronic versions of the transcripts, which have allowed some text-searching capability, no electronic version of the Report has been publicly available.

This year is the tenth anniversary of the commencement of the Inquiry, and despite this passage of time, the Inquiry and its Report are still topical in the political and social culture of Queensland. The Report dealt with corruption issues of the time, and Commissioner Fitzgerald made recommendations for reform of public administration and criminal justice in Queensland.

Another reason for the Report's continuing seminal importance is that other states have been through similar experiences with long and probing inquiries - the WA Royal Commission into the Commercial Activities of Government and other Matters and the successive Western Australian Commission on Government inquiry, the South Australian Royal Commission into the State Bank and more recently the Royal Commission into the New South Wales Police Service under Commissioner Wood. This Index may assist observers to draw comparisons with the Queensland Fitzgerald inquiry and its findings.

As well as more generic and specific subject terms, this Index pays particular attention to all names, aliases and familiar names which appear in the text and the appendices of the Report. The author has successfully tackled the indexing of a very complex report, and is to be congratulated on her initial foray into this field.

NOTES:

1. Except for its main entry, The Commission of Inquiry into Possible Illegal Activities and Associated Police Misconduct is referred to throughout as 'the Inquiry'.
2. Information contained within square brackets is in addition to that contained within the text.
3. Page numbers preceded by 'A' refer to the appendices.
4. For reasons of time and space, the names of Inquiry staff who were required to appear as witnesses have not been indexed, although the substance of their evidence has.
5. Because of inconsistencies in the spelling of names and the usage of first names, it is possible that a few individuals may have more than one entry. Regrettably, there has not been the opportunity to verify the identities of all those concerned.
